Gilbert's Witty Comment.

Str W. S. Gilbert's wit and humor were always ready. He was a fine raconteur and a good after dinner speaker. Rutland Barrington, the old Savoyard, said that "staying in Gilbert's house was like living in a literary fireworks factory."

Barrington played the Captain in "Pinafore." At rehearsal one day Gilbert, who was an autocratic and magnificent stage manager, told him to cross the stage, which represented the deck of H. M. S. Pinafore, and sit on a skylight "in a pensive attitude."

Barrington obeyed orders, but unfortunately the skylight had only been rigged up temporarily, and the portly Barrington crashed through it. "That's an expensive attitude," said Gilbert in a flash.

FIND SOURCE OF TYPHOID FEVER

Representative of State Health Department Visits McSherrystown and New Oxford. Investigation Meets with Success.

The cause of the typhoid fever epidemic at McSherrystown and New Oxford has been discovered and removed by Dr. C. J. Hunt, of the Department of Health, Harrisburg. Dr. Hunt, who visited both towns this week, has not yet made his report and until that is done the origin of the sickness which has caused more or less alarm will not be made public.

At McSherrystown Dr. Hunt installed a Board of Health with the following members: Dr. George L. Rice, Charles S. Staub, Fabian L. Smith, Lewis Krichen and Paul Lawrence. Dr. C. A. Rice was elected secretary and James B. Devine, the Health Officer. The new board placed placards on all the houses where typhoid fever is present, not as a quarantine but as a notice to the public that the disease exists in the house.

All the cases at McSherrystown are getting along well and improving rapidly.

Dr. Hunt made a thorough examination of conditions at New Oxford and the report of his finding will be awaited with interest. New Oxford has had a board of health for some time and the usual precautions to prevent a spread of the disease were taken. Physicians there were also very successful in dealing with cases both in and near the town.

EMMITSBURG WANTS LIGHT

Emmitsburg is beginning to plan over the possibilities of getting electrical current from the power house which the Frederick Railroad and Hagerstown Railroad will build at Securtity in the near future. Some months ago the town took up the matter of building a plant of its own and books were opened for subscriptions. The plans called for the expenditure of $7,000 for the erection of the plant, and the purchase of the wires and other necessary fixtures. The necessary outlay seemed large for the town and it was finally decided to let the matter drop for the present until there were developments elsewhere which would save the town some three or four thousand dollars.

AEROPLANES FOR FAIR

The managers of the York County Agricultural Society have signed a contract for a series of aeroplane flights during the annual county fair the first week of next October.

As the York County Agricultural Society will have no strong competition within a radius of 50 miles, the midway of the society's annual exhibition in October will be more complete than it was last year. The annual fair of Richmond, Va., was held last year concurrently with the York fair and proved a potent competitor in securing midway attractions.

Because of tempting inducements held forth by the management of the Richmond exhibition, many midway shows of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania circuits, skipped York and jumped to the Virginia capital. The result was that all space of the York County Agricultural Society's enlarged midway was not occupied during the season of last year's exhibition. Such will not be the case this year, it is stated by the management. The Richmond fair will be held a week later than the York event and as has been stated, there will be no live competition within a radius of 50 miles of York during the week of October 2-6.

TO ATTEND DEDICATION

TAFT GIVES MEDAL TO AVIATOR

Atwood Flies to Capital in the Rain.

TAFT GAVE REMARKABLE EXHIBITION

Birdman Made Sensational Flights Around Capitol Building and Over Washington Monument.

Washington, July 15. — President Taft received his first aerial visitor on Friday afternoon. The president stood on the rear portico of the White House as Harry N. Atwood, of Boston, after circling the Washington monument, flew directly into the White House grounds and landed on the grassy lawn a short distance from the portico.

Alighting from the machine, Atwood walked to where the president stood and was presented by him with a gold medal from the Aero club of Washington.

Following the medal presentation, Atwood re-entered his machine and after a beautiful start soared away over the White House fountain and trees to Potomac park, where he alighted on the polo field. He returned to College Park later in the day.

Atwood flew at express train speed and landed on the speedway within eight minutes after leaving the aviation field.

When Atwood arrived at the speedway he was completely drenched, part of the flight having been made through a rain storm. He had to change his clothing at the New Willard hotel.

A large crowd assembled on the speedway to see him alight. Atwood was the guest at a luncheon given by the chamber of commerce. He was presented to the members by General Robert Shaw Oliver, assistant secretary of war, and Charles J. Bell, of the Washington Aero club.

After the luncheon Atwood made an ascent in his aeroplane and flew to the White House, where President Taft, in the presence of nearly 100 members of the Washington Aero club, presented him with the gold medal of the club.

Purchased Hamilton's Aeroplane.

Atwood said Thursday he would positively make his flight, but no aeroplane was at his disposal, and the Hamilton machine was already taken apart and ready for shipment. Atwood came to the aviation field at College Park and announced to the correspondents that he had purchased Hamilton's aeroplane for $3725.

On his first ascent he went up for nearly 1000 feet and gave a remarkable exhibition of volplaning, diving, banking and making figure eights. He made a sensational dive of over a hundred feet in the air, and so startled the medical corps of the army aviation school that they hurried a band ambulance to the field, feeling sure the daring aviator would be dashed to earth. He fooled them by coming to within thirty feet of the ground and then, without the least apparent effort, climbing back 400 feet. Atwood kept this exhibition up for fifteen minutes and then made a fine landing.

The capital was reached by Atwood in about ten minutes. The members of congress who were in the building, as well as those in the senate and house office buildings, hurried outside, and the aviator was greeted by a most distinguished gathering. He circled the capital building, glided over the office buildings, flew around the library of congress and around the capitol grounds and then, like a bullet from a gun, shot down Pennsylvania avenue in the direction of Potomac park.

Reaching the park, Atwood again circled around in the air and then climbed to a thousand feet over the Washington monument. For a minute the aeroplane seemed to be perfectly still, and then like a flash of lightning it shot down directly for the top of the monument. The spectators shivered, and on all sides persons could be heard saying that Atwood surely would be killed.

When the aviator got within ten feet of the top of the monument he gracefully righted the aeroplane and again circled the park, while the crowd below cheered him again and again. Returning to the monument, Atwood climbed to about 500 feet from the top and then made a daring and beautiful spiral glide around it, nearly touching the earth as he finished, but he did not land, and again the machine went up in the air.

Exploding Soda Tank Kills Boy.

Selbyville, Del., July 15.—Tearing a great hole in the hip of Archie Bodley, a young man of Chincoteague, an exploding soda fountain severed a main artery and the lad died in about an hour after the accident. Bodley was charging a soda water tank when the tank exploded. The steel of which the tank was made struck the lad on the hip, while other pieces flew in all directions.

Two More Die of Cholera.

New York, July 15.—Health Officer Doty reported the deaths from cholera of two passengers of the steamship Moltke, removed while under observation to the Swinburne hospital. They were Gabrielle Mastrobrown, eighteen years old, who died on July 12, and Lucia Daidone, aged sixty-nine years, who died on July 14.

JOSEPH W. FOLK.

Former Governor of Missouri a Candidate For President.

LOOM FOLK FOR PRESIDENT

Missouri Democrats Concede New Jersey to Woodrow Wilson.

St. Louis, July 15.—The campaign to nominate ex-Governor Joseph W. Folk for president at the Democratic national convention in 1912 was started with the opening of headquarters by the Missouri Democratic league in the Central National bank building.

Lon Sanders, president, and W. J. Lochran, secretary of the league, will have charge of the movement, aided by Nelson W. McLeod, chairman of the executive committee.

The efforts of the league officers for the time being will be centered on arousing sentiment for Mr. Folk in those states where the delegates to the national convention will be selected for the first time in the history of national politics at direct primaries. These states include North Dakota, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Oregon and New Jersey.

No attempt is to be made to garner the New Jersey delegation, which is conceded to Governor Wilson. The Folk campaign, however, according to Mr. Sanders, will be extended throughout the west and northwest, after which attention will be paid to New England.

William J. Bryan has endorsed Folk, Wilson and Champ Clark as presidential possibilities.

ENGLAND WON'T HELP JAPAN TO FIGHT US

Arbitration Pact an Offset Against Alliance.

London, July 15.—A revised Anglo-Japanese treaty was signed in London on Friday.

The fourth clause corroborates the forecast from Tokyo July 11, in which it was said that Great Britain proposed to modify the clause providing for mutual assistance in the event of war, making the provision inapplicable in the event that either party to the alliance was fighting with a nation with whom the other had concluded a general arbitration treaty.

The treaty is to run for ten years from date. The most important change from the earlier agreement is embodied in the fourth article, providing that if either party concludes a treaty of general arbitration with a third power, the alliance shall not entail an obligation to go to war with that power.

The treaty replaces the treaty of alliance and the preamble states that the step is taken because of changes which have taken place in the situation since the agreement of alliance was signed.

The only other change from the wording of the original treaty is the omission of article 3, recognizing Japan's paramountcy in Korea. By an exchange of notes England and Japan have prolonged for two years article 5 of the Anglo-Japanese commercial treaty so far as concerns Canada.

5,000,000 BACKWARD PUPILS

Approximately That Number in the United States.

San Francisco, July 15.—The closing day of the National Education association's convention developed a program the most important of the session, from an educational point of view.

Much attention was given to the study of the "backward child problem." Dr. Maximilian P. E. Grossman, of Plainfield, N. J., said the country contains between four and five million children of this type, and of these at least 500,000 are distinctly abnormal.

A tendency to use most stringent measures to discourage the propagation of inevitably backward children was shown in other papers and in discussions. Robert J. Aley, president of the University of Maine, commended medical inspection of school children.

SENATE DECIDES DAYS FOR VOTES

July 22 Fixed For Action on Reciprocity Pact.

ADJOURN EARLY IN AUGUST

Agreement to Vote on Important Bills, Offered by Mr. Penrose, Is Reached by Senate Leaders.

Washington, July 15.—An agreement to vote on the Canadian reciprocity bill on July 22 was adopted in the senate without opposition.

Agreements also were made for votes on other measures which will carry the session through the "legislative day" of Aug. 7, immediately after which congress will adjourn.

The agreement calls for votes as follows: July 22, Canadian reciprocity; July 27, wool revision bill; Aug. 1, free list bill; Aug. 3, congressional re-appointment bill; Aug. 7, Arizona-New Mexico statehood bill.

All the bills included in the agreement already have passed the house. If amendments are made to them they will be still subject to quick conference between the representatives of the two houses.

The "legislative day" for statehood would permit a "recess" from day to day if found necessary. Such a contingency is not regarded as probable.

The agreement, following a series of conferences between Senators Penrose, LaFollette, Martin, Smoot, Stone, Bailey, Burton, Borah, Bristow, Bourne and other senators, was formally offered in the senate by Senator Penrose, as leader of the Republicans.

The original suggestion for an agreement was made by Senator LaFollette, Republican insurgent, who was willing to fix an earlier date than that named for the vote on reciprocity. The demand for a later date was made by others who desire to speak on the bill.

Many obstacles in fixing the series of dates were encountered. Senator Borah insisted on a date for consideration of a conference report on the joint resolution for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. The vote of statehood was fixed for "legislative day" of Aug. 7, instead of the calendar day of that date in order to protect the popular election bill.

As soon as the agreement was reported to the senate the acquiescence of the regular Democrats was expressed by Senator Martin. "We think ample time has been allowed for the debate of all measures," he said.

Senator LaFollette agreed that all interests in the senate had been consulted, and that it had been deemed wise to agree upon dates when all of the important bills now pending could be disposed of.

The reciprocity debate will be quickly terminated, and other bills will be taken up for discussion. Senator Penrose said he understood the reciprocity debate was about finished.

Senator Martin said the Democrats would endeavor to win consideration of the publicity of the campaign contributions' bill before congress adjourns. Senator Kenyon asked particularly as to this bill.

Senator Penrose said it had been impossible to get an agreement on more bills than those named; but that the senate would be free to take up the publicity bill if it so desired.

The agreement to vote is so drawn that amendments may be voted on at any time. Senator Bristow called attention to the fact that this would prevent senators from leaving Washington until the day of the votes.

"If they do, they may find their bills amended when they get back," he declared.

HANGED FOR DOUBLE CRIME

Negro Murderer on Scaffold Protested His Innocence.

Wilmington, Del., July 15.—Reese Roberts, a Chester, Pa., colored man, who was arrested on the charge of murdering Mr. and Mrs. Robert Casey, of Claymont, on Saturday, Aug. 20, 1910, and was convicted on a trial for the murder of the woman, was hanged at the New Castle county workhouse at Greenbank. The victim died without a struggle.

The execution was quietly and efficiently conducted. Warden Crawford had carefully made all preparations and they moved on schedule. Roberts was calm and collected and submitted quietly to all the details.

Just before the cap was drawn over his head he made a brief statement, in which he declared: "I am innocent of the crime of which I was convicted. I did not kill Mr. and Mrs. Casey."

Washington as a Humorist.

While president Washington's humor seemed to find expression in the diplomacy of self protection. A French revolutionist came to him for a general testimonial, which Washington did not care to grant, yet he did not wish to give offense to the French by a curt refusal, so he wrote an evasive card worthy of Lincoln—"C. Volney needs no recommendation from G. Washington."

SAY CULT WILL GO ON

Mother of Girl Sticks to Convicted "Absolute Life" Apostle.

Chicago, July 15.—Mrs. Felicia Rees, Mona Rees and Mrs. Stephen H. Bridges, three members of the Absolute Life cult, received the news of the conviction of Evelyn Arthur See on a charge of abducting Mildred Bridges in the flat at 2415 Racine avenue, referred to in the trial as the "love jungle."

"Absolute Life will go on as before," said Mrs. Rees. "Although its leader may be taken away from the eyes of the world, the work will go on because it is truth. It cannot be killed nor buried."

Stephen H. Bridges, father of the girl See was convicted of abducting, appeared to be pleased with the verdict.

"What do I think about that verdict?" he replied. "What do I think? It was all right. But I'm sorry it's Joliet. It ought to be hell. He ruined my home, my daughter; he took my wife away from me, and now he'll have to pay for a part of it."

"And now the next thing is to do something for my little girl. She is under the control of the juvenile court and in custody. I want her at home with me. I'm going to try to get the court to parole her to her father. I want to take care of her."

See was admitted to $5000 bail.

AMERICAN GUNBOAT ORDERED TO HAITI

Revolutionary Movement Endangers U. S. Interests.

Washington, July 15.—Because of the serious revolutionary movement in northern Haiti, which is jeopardizing extensive American interests, the United States gunboat Petrel was ordered from Guantanamo, Cuba, to Cape Haitien.

This action was taken in response to a request from American Consul Livingston at Cape Haitien. That port and Fort Liberté are threatened with attack by the revolutionists and many American interests are exposed to danger.

In addition to this internal dissension, Haiti has some international problems on her hands. The United States, France, England, Germany and Italy recently presented a joint note to the little republic requesting that the claims of their citizens should be settled by diplomacy within three months, or in the event of the failure of that procedure that they be submitted to the arbitration of a claims commission. The state department has not received a reply to that note.

SYNOPSIS.

Dora Fullerton decides to go on the stage. She breaks her engagement with Graham Winthrop and meets Willard Holcomb, an actor. Her family opposes her ambition. Holcomb is respectful and friendly. Dora sees life behind the scenes and makes her first appearance in a small town. Graham Winthrop meets M. Vavin, a noted French playwright and lecturer. Vavin knows Dora and her father, Professor Fullerton. He is on his way to America. The company Dora joins is a failure. Professor Fullerton and Dora's Aunt Cornelia are much pleased by this. Holcomb's first play is accepted. He wants Dora to play the leading role. Holcomb visits Dora at Lenox. Aunt Cornelia, who is a shrew, tells Dora she has low instincts like her mother, who also had stage aspirations. Legal proceedings to restrain Dora from going on the stage are talked of. Holcomb proposes to her, and she accepts him. Dora tells M. Vavin of this, and Holcomb announces the engagement to Professor Fullerton, who is angry. Vavin encourages Dora.

CHAPTER XI.

THE dozen or more men who write what is accepted as the critical opinion of New York city are generally snugly asleep in their little cots when the momentous decisions of which they have been delivered are being read by the anxious and nervous authors, who sit up even until dawn to learn their fate. Kind newspaper publishers—more kind probably than they intended to be to these nervous folk of the stage—have in recent years adopted a policy of issuing a special edition of their various newspapers for what is known as the midnight sale—a sale that has grown with the all night care and the development of the restaurant section, that has kept a large number of citizens out of bed if not out of mischief. The philanthropic results of these so called early editions have been at least the shortening of the torture of the actor who has had what is so lightly called his "Broadway opportunity."

Despite the many friends who congratulated him and the applause of the ushers, Holcomb knew that his piece had not succeeded. One or two former associates in the companies that he had been in called loudly for a speech at the end of the second act; but, despite all this and even Ludlow's effusive praise, he knew that his play had not "got over"—that is, over the footlights.

He had been surprised at Dora's prompt appearance at the rehearsal. He had taken an opportunity to thank her formally, and she had replied to him with equal reserve.

Before the curtain went up on the night performance he went back to her dressing room and spoke more frankly: "Dora, you have been more than kind. I showed myself very weak last night, and you showed yourself a woman with great courage. Whatever the outcome of this, I shall never forget it."

They were talking through the half opened door of her dressing room, with but a few minutes left for her final preparations, so that her "Thank you, Mr. Holcomb," left him still in doubt as to whether she had undergone any change in feeling.

He had gone back at the end of the play mainly to thank her for going through the "big scene" as he had rehearsed it and hoping against hope to get some expression from her that would quiet his turbulent spirit, but he found her dressing room besieged by the Winthrops, Elliott, Professor Fullerton and the haunting Aunt Cornelia. The little conversation that they had was therefore brief and formal, and, while there was some talk of a supper party after the theater, he was quick to observe that there was no calculation about having him in it and little enthusiasm about his part of the evening's venture. Vavin had left the theater after a friendly handshake to catch a train for Boston, where he was to deliver one of his "irrepressible lectures."

"I will return tomorrow night on the 11 o'clock train. Do me the honor to have supper with me. I will talk with you of your play and other things," he had said to Holcomb.

In a way Holcomb had expected that the play would not be a great success, but he had hoped that it would sufficiently establish him in Dora's eyes by its reception to bring them closer together. He was genuinely disappointed that the Winthrops and the Fuller-tons had not invited him to their supper party, and, strange as it doubtless would have seemed to the many friends in the theater who would have liked to have him for guest or host, he wandered out through the stage door, solitary, saddened and wondering where the deuce he would go to get the bite of food and drink that he needed and yet not run into some gathering connected with his own production. He was bitterly commenting to himself on how lonely a man of pride can be when he met two or three of the minor actors of the company and joined their party gladly, and with them he sat up until those fateful early editions were spread before them and he knew that his play was a disastrous failure.

He would have given a great deal to be able to talk to Dora that afternoon, for the evening papers only re-enforced the judgment of the morning papers, and the "sale" at the box office indicated that the public had no intention of quarreling with the critics. He was in and around the theater most of the day, hoping that Dora might come to the playhouse or that she might at least telephone to him and condescend, there being absolutely no reason for congratulations.

Night at last came, and he had an excuse for seeing her, but she merely nodded to him as she passed him in the wings, and he turned bitterly away from the stage and went out to the front of the house to watch his play and see if he could see it as the critics had. He was not entirely successful in getting their point of view. He saw many faults, but he still felt that the play had merit and that it simply had missed fire, but just where the fault lay he was unable to discover.

He was glad, however, that he had the engagement with M. Vavin, for the idle chatter of his associates meant nothing to him. He reached the hotel shortly after Vavin himself had arrived and found that the old gentleman had already made preparations for a supper for three.

"I hope," said Vavin, "that my request was not too much like a command."

"Any request of yours, monsieur," replied Holcomb, "will have that force." For the younger dramatist not only knew how deeply he was obligated to the Frenchman, but he also had a genuine reverence for his ability and affection for his kindly ironic personality.

"You are despondent," said the old man. "Let me offer you a glass of wine." And under his kindly treatment Holcomb poured forth what he called the wretched climax of a wretched endeavor.

"You are wrong there," said Vavin. "You have written a good play—not a remarkable play, but it is damnably prepared, that play of yours. You and I will see that it is still made a success."

"You and I?" repeated Holcomb. "Yes, you and I. You have never been in Paris? Then you do not know why French plays succeed. There are many reasons, but those plays, monsieur, are wonderfully well rehearsed. Pardon me if for a moment I change the subject. You love Miss Fullerton?"

"I do."

"You have told her?"

"I have."

"Tell her again and again. The spirit is wounded. You have been weak, my boy. A sensitive girl who has had fighting conditions all her life cannot be handled at first as the woman who is grown up and who is strong, who has had sympathy and who has tasted of success. Now, again, this profession of yours. You are anxious to write plays. Why—the money?"

"Not entirely," replied Holcomb. "I have made a living ever since I was ten years old, but I see things that way. Some fellows see pictures—they paint. Some see buildings—they plan. I see men and women, and my men and women collide and persuade—and fight."

"You see them here," said Vavin, indicating his forehead. "You have been—"

"Certainly," replied Holcomb.

"But the public," said Vavin—"what of it? Do you think of the influence that you have on the public? Are you thinking of your public when you write?"

Holcomb hesitated. He was not quite sure that he had thought of his public.

"It occurs to me sometimes," he said. "It must occur always," said Vavin impressively. "There is no suggestion so subtle, so sure, so strong, as the suggestion the playwright makes from the stage to the people. I have white hairs. Yours is dark. Believe me, I would give the rest of my life to go back and take from my plays every word that has made any man less honest, less hopeful, less kind."

"Is my play that leads you to say this to me, monsieur?"

"Oh, no; pardon me," replied Vavin. "It is you. I have been asking questions about you, and I learned that—I shall be brief, monsieur—you have a rival in your affection for my—little friend Dora."

"Yes," said Holcomb wearily; "I guess Graham Winthrop is very much of a rival just now."

"Have you talked with her since yesterday?"

"No; she has avoided me."

"Because she doubts," said Vavin—"doubts herself, and because of that I bring you here together tonight. I am for you, my boy," and he held out his hand with a smile that had in it more sunshine than Holcomb had seen in many a day.

The telephone bell rang, and Vavin's answer was to say that the people should come up. "You got my note at the theater last night," he said, "tell-

"MON DIEU! I WILL NOT PERMIT YOU TO COMPLIMENT ME IN THAT WAY."

"You? Good!" And as a knock sounded at the door he said to Holcomb quickly, "Remind me tonight that there is moonlight," and with this enigmatic instruction he ushered Dora, Winthrop and Aunt Cornelia into the room.

"I am more than honored," Vavin said, bowing to Aunt Cornelia and shaking hands with Dora, "by this visit. I had wished to have a little talk with Miss Fullerton about her acting and about herself."

"I don't see, M. Vavin," said the spinster, "why you cannot come with us and Dora to Mrs. Winthrop's and have your talk there."

"I should be most delighted," he said; then, turning to Dora: "I have my reasons for asking you to have supper here with me and Mr. Holcomb. Will you not?"

Dora, still under the influence of Aunt Cornelia, looked from one to the other.

"This is a little too much for me," said Aunt Cornelia. "Before I'd think of having supper in a man's room in a hotel!"

"But, my dear lady," protested Vavin with great suavity, "my man Henri—Henri was—with me before this young lady was even born, and here also are Mr. Holcomb and my white hairs. Mon Dieu! I will not permit you to compliment me in that way."

"Compliment you?" almost screamed the New England lady.

"Surely," said Vavin, with a smile, "you did not mean it unkindly?"

"I think I'll stay," said Dora.

"I wash my hands of the whole affair. Come on, Graham."

"I believe I'm not invited to stay," said Winthrop, with a grin.

"When you and I have supper together," said Vavin politely, "I should like to feel that the conversation was restricted to us two. I will see that Miss Fullerton is home within an hour," said Vavin to Graham as he let them out.

"Very well," said the good natured young man. "Mother and I'll sit up for you, Dora."

"Won't you speak to Mr. Holcomb?" said Vavin as he came back into the dining room.

"I have already said good evening," replied the girl.

"And that is all you think is necessary for the present? Very well. I have asked you both to come here because I wish to see if we cannot do something with Mr. Holcomb's play. I think we can make it a success." Dora's hopes rose high.

A TURKEY FEAST.

General Lee Showed His Officers the Way to Enjoy It.

General Lee in the drawing room was a dignified and quiet gentleman, very kindly and gentle, especially with women and children. "On the field," says Major Ransom in Harper's Magazine, "he was the general, the commander in all essential points. But in other points he could be as sympathetic and considerate as he was at home."

"In the latter part of December a barrel was delivered at our camp marked 'General Lee and Staff.' We opened it and found it was packed full of turkeys. We sent word to General Lee, and he rode over to our camp. There was snow on the ground, and we had laid the turkeys out on a board on the snow, the biggest in the middle and the others tapering off to the smallest at each end. There were about a dozen of them.

"General Lee dismounted and joined the group gathered round the present, carrying his unsung and undrawn sword in his hand. He was told that the big turkey in the middle was his. He stood looking down at the turkeys for a moment and then said, touching the big turkey with the scabbard of his sword:

"This, then, is my turkey? I don't know, gentlemen, what you are going to do with your turkeys, but I wish mine sent to the hospital in Petersburg so that some of the convalescents may have a good dinner."

"He then turned on his heel and, walking to his horse, mounted and rode away. We looked at one another for a moment and then, without a word, replaced the turkeys in the barrel and sent them to the hospital."

BUD MARS FALLS IN ERIE FLIGHT

Aviator Loses Control of Machine and Drops 100 Feet.

PROBABLY FATALY INJURED

His Wife Sees Tragedy and Her Condition Is Reported to Be Serious as Result of the Shock.

Erie, Pa., July 15.—Bud Mars, the well known American aviator, was probably fatally injured in this city, when he lost control of his air machine during a flight and crashed from a height of several hundred feet to the ground.

The heavy biplane dropped on top of him. His injuries are of such a nature, it is said, that there is practically no hope for his recovery.

The aviator's wife witnessed the accident, and her condition is serious, due to the shock.

Mars had made one successful flight. He was in the air for the second time when the accident occurred. Several thousand spectators were watching Mars. He circled the field a number of times at a height of several hundred feet. Suddenly the machine made a dip downward, and Mars was seen to jerk at something in an effort to regain control of the machine.

It was a futile attempt, however, and an instant later the biplane struck the ground. The machine was completely wrecked and Mars lay under it. He was covered with blood and at first it was believed he was dead.

Drs. Boughton and Gigliotti, who were present as spectators, were soon at the side of the injured man. Willing hands soon cleared away the wreckage and Mars was carried to an improvised field hospital. The serious nature of Mars' injuries was evident and he was rushed to a hospital.

Dr. Boughton issued a statement from the hospital to the effect that the aviator's chest was badly injured, that he had sustained concussion of the brain and suffered internal injuries, while he is also bruised from head to foot.

The aviation meet was held under the auspices of a local newspaper. After his first flight Mars fixed several levers on the machine and then started the second flight. He had not been in the air long when for some reason he started to descend. The machine rocked badly for a time and then shot downward with terrific velocity.

The amazed spectators stood still for a moment. Then there was a scream and Mrs. Mars, the birdman's wife, rushed toward the wrecked machine. Before she reached her husband's side, however, she was overcome with grief and was carried from the field.

AFTER WILEY'S FOES

House Committee to Learn Who Wants Food Expert "Fired."

Washington, July 15.—Congressional investigation of the charges against Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist and government pure food expert, was agreed on by the majority members of the house committee on expenditures in the department of agriculture.

Representative Moss, of Indiana, chairman of the committee, called it together. For half an hour previous to the meeting the Democratic members were in conference and decided that the investigation should be made. It was left to the full committee to determine when the investigation would begin, what witnesses would be summoned and various other details.

The committee decided to call at once upon Secretary of Agriculture Wilson for a copy of all the charges, testimony and other papers in the case, and to begin the investigation immediately upon their receipt. Secretary Wilson, Solicitor McCabe and members of the personnel board which recommended Wiley's removal probably will be summoned first.

It was declared that the committee wants to know "who wanted Dr. Wiley fired and why." The recommendation that the pure food expert be dismissed and the reasons therefor, it is said, will be thoroughly gone into.

Asks Divorce of Minister.

Reading, Pa., July 15.—Mrs. Jennie M. Seifert, of Reading, brought a suit for divorce against Rev. W. White Seifert, whose whereabouts are alleged to be unknown. The couple were married in 1898, and the wife alleges she was deserted on Jan. 1, 1909, while he was pastor of a charge at Dauphin, near Harrisburg. The wife says she was chased out of the house by her husband and finally deserted.

Girl Saves Child and Rescuer.

Allentown, Pa., July 15.—Three little boys were bathing in the Little Lehigh here, when their "wings" collapsed. John Dugan saved two, when the third, Harold Christman, nearly dragged him under in his struggles. Both were finally rescued by Miss Mary Appel.

Grief Kills Steelton Man.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 15.—John Lees, aged seventy-two years, one of the old-time residents of Steelton, is dead. Grief over the death of his wife was one of the causes of death.

MRS. NAPOLITANO NOT TO BE HANGED

Sentence of Woman Who Killed Husband Commuted.

Ottawa, Ont., July 15.—The cabinet commuted to life imprisonment the sentence of death passed upon the Italian woman, Angeline Napolitano, for the murder of her husband at Saint Ste Marie.

Life imprisonment will mean twenty years at least. Members of the cabinet stated that they were not influenced by the numerous appeals for mercy, but were actuated wholly by the merits of the case.

The case of Mrs. Napolitano attracted attention and sympathy for the woman in all parts of the United States and Canada, and many thousands of letters have been sent to the Canadian department of justice within the past month.

The woman is expected to become a mother within two weeks, but it was not only for this reason that appeals for clemency were addressed to the Canadian authorities. Her husband was shown to have plotted to sell his wife as a "white slave" at her trial, and it was to save herself from this fate that she killed him.

Mrs. Napolitano had been known to be a quiet, law-abiding woman even after she knew that her husband was the associate of criminals. It was not denied at the trial that the woman had committed the murder practically in self-defense, but the Canadian law, noted for its severity in cases of murder, was not interpreted in this case to consider it an exception.

Protests in behalf of the woman came even from England and the Continent, but most of them came from the cities of the United States. In Chicago women's clubs interested themselves in the case and several meetings were held.

Mrs. Napolitano, who has four little children, had been sentenced to be hanged Aug. 9. The murder was committed on April 16 last.

T. R. as Steel Witness.

Washington, July 15.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will be the star witness before the Stanley steel investigating committee at its forthcoming meeting in New York, according to information received here. Colonel Roosevelt will be asked to tell all he knows of the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company by the steel trust and to explain his part as president of the United States in assisting the merger.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh of the Bladder. Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution. It is a safe and sure cure. The price is $1.00 per bottle. Send for free literature. Address: F. J. CHENEY and Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists. 75c.

A TOMBSTONE STORY.

The man who lies beneath this stone
Was a man of letters.
He knew the whole microbia
With its long Latin terms.
He saw germs on sweet ladies' lips
And taboos of sanitation.
Of course communion he refused,
Fearing contamination.
In eggs he saw a billion germs.
In milk, in butter, beef,
Were microbes multitudinous,
Septillions past belief.
The mulley cow had germs by stacks;
The tomato was alive;
The roosters had their toes all full;
Old Tower was a hive.
He saw them on the baby,
And he saw them on the calf.
The ring tail pig was lousy full,
As was his better half.
To him the whole world was a germ,
Himself, of course, excepted,
And so he thought the universe
Should be well disinfected.
He sprinkled lime in his wife's shoes,
With acid sprayed the town
And armed himself with great squirt guns
To hunt those microbes down.
But, oh, did microbes kill this man,
Or did he die in bed?
My, no! He went to spray a mule
And got kicked in the head.
C. M. BARNITZ.

KEEP THE WATER FRESH AND PURE.

It's a wonder some one doesn't knock
The egg man for putting water into eggs.
Talk about the milkman milking the pump! Why, the egg farmer puts 65 1/2 per cent of water into every egg and gets 25 cents for water every time he sells a dozen for 40 cents.
But we've seen no one kicking high
jinks about it, but we fear some fellows might get kicked if customers

THE INSANITARY OPEN VESSEL.

saw the kind of water they force their hens to drink to make that 65 1/2 per cent of egg.
But some believe a hen is a natural
born filter; that she can eat and drink
any kind of rot and her miraculous
mechanism sifts the germs right out
and retains only the pure elements
for her system, flesh and eggs.
They claim "hens are dirtier than hogs," and so they keep them on the
hogpen plan, and rot begets rot.
But others believe Job's doctrine:
"Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one."
And they also believe "blessed are
the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy," and they practice this toward
the creatures around them.
Pure, sweet water is one of God's great gifts to men, but millions die
every year because of its pollution.
Polluted water kills fowls old and
young, retards growth and makes eggs
and market poultry bearers of bacteria.

DON'TS.

Don't put the poultry raising on
Marion and then pocket the proceeds.
Let her handle the cash and there'll
be no crash. Be fair to the fair.
Don't let your turkeys roam over
your neighbor's farm to do harm.
Friendship is more precious than turkey meat, so follow the Golden Rule
and all keep sweet.
Don't keep eggs too long before setting. Ten to fifteen days the limit.
Don't keep a hen that will go over
the fence onto your neighbor's garden.
I've seen a hen or give her the ax for
such acts.
Don't hatch too many chicks. They'll be crowded, die or not grow. You'll get disgusted and busted.
Don't waste brains and boodle on
every newfangled theory that you read of. It may read pretty on the page, but later will make you weep
and rage.
Don't talk much. "Talk is cheap,"
but too much of it makes one cheap.
Don't neglect to feed greens both summer and winter. They assist digestion, furnish nutrients, make eggs
and meat are very cheap feed.
Don't lay in meat food for winter
without knowing its protein content
before selecting. Remember that spoiled meat product poisons poultry.

"The railway journey from Kyoto to

A Garden Song.

Sing a song of gardens!
Time is come for sowing;
Trees are out, bees are out,
Apple blossoms are blowing.
Pansy buds, poppy buds,
Spring is here, indeed,
When my man Johnny comes
Along with his seed.
Sing a song of gardens!
Summer sun is burning;
Lilies droop, roses stoop,
Long for night's returning.
Think they see an angel
With a cheek of tan
When my man Johnny comes
Along with his can.
Sing a song of gardens!
All a blaze of bloom,
Jasmine and gillyflower
Elbowing for room.
Summer's come, summer's come,
Sure as sure can be,
When my man Johnny brings
My flower in to me.

"Are you a man or an angel?"
3. Who was the wonderful Swiss boy who collected a large number of fish and kept them in a stone basin
which he built in his father's yard for
that purpose?
4. What young authoress kept school
in a barn when she was only sixteen years old?
5. What poet when but four years of age made a little pulpit in his nursery and, using his apron for a gown, preached real sermons to an imaginary audience?
6. What author as a boy spent one year in a log cabin and afterward
wrote a book about his childhood's
experience?
7. What poet as a schoolboy spent his time in scribbling verses on his slate
rather than doing his school work?
8. What author was given a chair

The Parasol Ant.

There is a kind of ant in tropical
countries that sometimes carries a bit
of green leaf over its head, as if it
were seeking to protect itself from the sun's rays, and for this reason it has come to be called the "parasol ant."
Now, ants have credit for so much intelligence that it was not unnatural
perhaps for the first observers of this leaf bearing habit to attribute it to a desire for shelter from the heat. They were seen every now and then in a great procession and in regular order
traveling along with the leaves over
their heads like little green banners.
They held the stem of the leaf in their
jaws and so deftly that it always kept
an upright position. Closer observation by naturalists has shown, however, that the ants do not carry the
leaves for protection from the sun,
which seems to be a fanciful and absurd conclusion at best, but that they place the leaves about their nests to form a kind of soil from which grows
a fungus that they like to feed on.
This is evidence enough of their intelligence without the ridiculous belief
that they use the leaves as parasols.

Monkey Conquers Tiger.

An animal trainer in Berlin went into a cage with several lions and tigers and took a chimpanzee along
with him to help entertain the audience. He was putting the monkey
through some tricks and had turned his back on the big cats. One tiger sprang at him, as wild beasts will
sometimes spring at their trainers,
and the man was thrown to the floor.
But before the tiger could do him
harm the chimpanzee had entered the fight with all his little strength. He jumped on the tiger's head and seized
the short, catlike ears, pulling till
the vicious beast yelled with pain.
The monkey kept on pulling, and the tiger,
rightened at what he had done and that he was having done to him, re-
reated to a corner of the cage, while
the trainer and his friend, the chimpanzee, hastened to put the bars between them and the cats.

Conundrums.

Why are crockeryware dealers unlike other business men? Because it won't do for them to crack up their goods.
Why is a clock the most persevering thing in creation? Because it is never more inclined to go on with its business than when it is completely wound
up.
Why is a good actor like a good architect? Because they both draw good houses.
Why is a blacksmith like a safe
theft? Because one is a horseshoe
and the other is a sure horse.
Why is a solar eclipse like a man shipping his boy? It's a hiding of the sun.
Why are policemen like the days of
May? Because they are numbered.

Poetry Making.

Each writes a line of poetry on a sheet of paper and then passes it on
to his neighbor, who must write a line
that will rhyme with the preceding
one and pass it on to the third person,
who in turn will write another line to rhyme with the one above, and so on
round the table.

room distance in the maximum time,

moves a little more quickly toward its
appointed goal.
"Next a platform ticket must be pro-
cured to enable one to board the train,
and finally one has to fight one's way
into a first class carriage. Why do all the passengers in Japan take their luggage into the already painfully small carriage instead of leaving it in the

UNIQUE PHOTOGRAPH OF POLE VAULTER GOING OVER THE BAR

A. COYLE IN ACTION.

One of the most promising young
pole vaulters developed in recent years
is Arthur Coyle of the New York A. C.
According to experts, he will equal or break the world's record of 12 feet 10 1/2
inches, now held by A. Scott of Colorado, at the metropolitan championship
to be held in New York the latter part of August. The above photograph shows Coyle going over the bar at a height of twelve feet.

PLANS FOR BIG BOAT RACE.

English Clubs Expect to Capture International Motorboat Series.
Commodore H. H. Melville of the Motorboat Club of America is now in London conferring with the English
yachtsmen over the final arrangements
for the forthcoming races for the British international trophy.
England will be represented by a team of three boats to race a trio from
this country.
The Duke of Westminster will send
over one of the challengers, but the name of his boat has not been revealed.
The duke's challenger probably will be a hydroplane of the multiple step
type, a shade under the forty feet in overall length. Another British craft will be the Maple Leaf II, owned by J. Mackay Edgarm, which established
a world's record with the phenomenal
speed of fifty-seven miles an hour during a trial run on the Solent several weeks ago.
The third British challenger may
come through the British Motor club
and will also be a hydroplane.
The preliminary trials start on Aug.
17.

Big Changes in Tigers and Athletics.

It is a peculiar coincidence that the Athletics and Tigers, who are battling for the pennant this year, as they have in most of the campaigns during
the past few years, have, with one exception, entirely new faces on their in-fields. Harry Davis is the only man
still playing who was on the team five years ago. Collins, Barry, Melanes
and Baker are new hands, as are Moriarty, Bush and Delahanty. Jennings'
infield has undergone many changes
since he won his first pennant for Detroit in 1907. O'Leary is the only one of the infielders who has been with the team since then, and he is no longer
used as a regular.

DIAMOND CHIRPS

By many St. Louis rooters Miller
Huggins is considered to be the brains
of the Cardinals.
Although he has lost the use of his
throwing arm, "Bullet Jack" Thoney
remains on the payroll of the Boston
Americans as a coacher.
Second Baseman Cunningham of the Washington club is "the biggest disappointment" of the year. Last season
he was hailed as a wonder.
Pitcher Alexander, the Phillies' find,
is the real "iron man" of the National league—in fact, the legitimate successor of the lamented Joe McGinnity.
In the spring the Washingtons were considered one of the strongest clubs
behind the bat, but as things have gone the backstop department has been the chief weakness of the team.

that is a passport for cleanliness the

shockingly dirty in every detail?
"We once in a weak moment looked
into a station master's room at a large
station, and for pure dirt it could have given points to a dust heap. In the train carriages the floors are covered
with the dirt of ages, cigarette ends
orange peel, sandwich papers. At in-

IT TURNED OUT ALL WRONG

By ELLEN BANKHURST

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Effie—Effie is my niece—is a good girl, but impractical. She is an orphan and was left to my care and guardianship by my sister, who was five years older than I. I promised to bring Effie up properly, do the best I could with her property and see that she married well. She is now eight-teen, and I'm very much afraid she is leaning toward that beggar Lawrence Beckwith. Therefore I am going to attempt to throw her in the way of Martin Saylor. Mr. Saylor is thirty-six, well off and has an excellent social position. I don't believe in girls marrying men of their own age. A girl needs a man older than herself to keep her in training.

Summer has come, and I have a house party at my cottage at Lake G.
I left Beckwith out of my invitations
and included Saylor. Saylor is getting bald, and there are a few grey hairs about his temples, but I don't care for that. Of course I haven't said a word to Effie about what I intend for her—that would spoil it all.
But I've told Saylor. Of course he couldn't say anything definite. He only remarked that to win my niece
should make any man very happy and very proud. I am well satisfied with the way the affair is progressing.

Effie proposed that we go up to the end of the lake on a picnic. We went
in boats, pulling up in the morning,
having our lunch in the woods, and back in the evening. As our party consisted of eleven we required six
boats, for we proposed to have only two in each boat. When we went down to get into the boats, Effie said
that she would pull the boat with only one in it herself. What did she do but get into it and pull away, leaving Mr.
Saylor standing with me. He very politely banded me into a boat and got in himself. The others paired off as they liked.

We hadn't gone a mile before I saw Effie ahead, making a landing at the point where the railroad station is located. Before we reached her a man got into the boat with her, and she pulled on up the lake. I wondered who he was and what it meant. I couldn't understand Saylor's action at
all. He didn't seem a bit huffy when Effie pulled away alone or when she took in a companion. He made himself as agreeable to me as if I had been Effie. But men have a way of concealing their feelings. I wish we women could do that.

When we reached the end of the lake
who should help me out of the boat
but Lawrence Beckwith. I was never so astonished in my life.

"Why," I exclaimed, "what brought
you here?"
"The purest luck. It's mighty strange how things happen sometimes.
I was on a train that stopped at a station. At that moment your niece rowed up to a landing. I waved my handkerchief to her and called to her.
She asked me if I wouldn't like to go on a picnic. I said I would, and here
I am."

"That's a very strange coincidence,"
I said coldly. "I wonder how it could have happened."
"Strangest thing in the world!" he replied.

Mr. Saylor turned and looked out on the lake.

Effie went off with Lawrence, and Saylor couldn't very well do anything else than attend upon me. You see,
all the others were mere boys and girls, and Saylor and I were the only elderly persons in the party. I was very much mortified at Effie's action.
It put me in an unpleasant attitude
towards the man I had told I wished
him for her husband.

However, he didn't seem to feel so awfully disappointed. At any rate, he made the best of it, not showing any displeasure. All the boy and girl couples of the party went off in different directions, leaving Saylor and me
alone to get what supplies we needed
for lunch. He took the ice out of our boat and put the champagne and butter on it, and together we unrolled the bundles containing the luncheon. I was leaning over a case of sardines
when I felt an arm around my waist
and, turning my face, looked right
into Saylor's.

"What do you mean?" I asked. "I brought you out here to make love to Effie."

"And I came to make love to you."

"To me?"

"Yes, to you."

"But I'm old enough to be your mother."

"I wasn't aware that sons were born before their mothers. I'm a couple of years older than you."

"How came that Beckwith boy
here?"

"Your niece and I cooked up a plan
to get him here. I sent the telegram
myself, telling him just what to do.
Effie aimed to meet the train at the station."

"Well, upon my word! This beats anything I ever knew. So you were in the plot?"

"I certainly was. I have been wishing for an opportunity to speak to you for some time. I certainly couldn't have done it today if I were to be as signed to your niece for the occasion."
Never did a picnic turn out more unexpectedly from what was intended than that one. On our return Effie was engaged to Beckwith and I to Saylor.
And I'm going to do just what I said
I'd never do—marry a man about my own age.

"Finally he departs, leaving behind
him the rubbish and an atmosphere
charged with germs and angry words.
Truly a Japanese porter's definition of cleaning up is removing rubbish from
one place to another."

Honesty needs no pains to set itself

Signaling at Sea.
The custom of signaling at sea by means of various colored flags is very ancient, and the method seems to have been brought to a degree of development bordering very closely on perfection. Many people have been astonished at the length of messages conveyed
in a few moments and with the use of
but half a dozen flags in various combinations, and when the extent of the language and the complexity of many necessary messages are considered the
eighteen flags in the signal flag locker
seem very inadequate. However, it must be remembered that the signal
code utilizes a sort of shorthand, and
many long messages, known to be of
frequent occurrence, have been contracted to a single showing of flags
in a given combination. The number of flags hoisted when a signal is made
never exceeds four. With the eighteen flags of various colors, using four for
each signal, no fewer than 78,642 combinations can be made.

An English Ghost.

A Westmoreland ghost used to haunt
the shores of Windermere, where the Lowthers from time immemorial have been lords of the lake—the "Crier of Claife." One tempestuous night in preraphaelite times a cry was heard across the water by the ferry-man at the Nab inn—"A boat!" The ferryman, against all his cronies' persuasions at the inn, set out. After many hours he reached the Nab again,
his boat dragged down by some unseen weight and himself with hair on end, a raving lunatic. Soon he died,
and every stormy night his wraith was heard in agonized shrieks across from Claife till at last the resident monk of Furness was sought in his retreat on Lady Holm and persuaded to "lay"
the unhappy spirit, which he duly did.
Harriet Martineau and others tell the tale.—London Chronicle.

A spray which is excellent in the killing of the several kinds of lice that infest plum, apple and some other
fruit trees is the kerosene emulsion.
To make at least a one pound bar of
laundry soap into a gallon of soft water, which should be heated to boiling,
so the soap will be completely dissolved. Remove from stove and pour in slowly one pint of kerosene, stirring the while vigorously. The stirring
should be continued until the oil combines with the suds and forms a creamy solution. Stir into this two gallons of cold soft water, and the solution is ready for use. Another preparation is made by steeping tobacco
stems or leaves in water at the rate of about a pound and a half to five gallons of water. The latter spray is preferable where one has large trees
or a considerable area to cover.

He Let Her Sleep.

Some years ago a Swansea vessel
was caught in a terrible gale. The captain had his wife on board, and when the wind was still rising he told her to go down below and sleep, for all was well. He remained on the bridge till the mate came up and said:
"We've done all we can. Hadn't you better tell the chaps to get out the boats?"

"Yes, yes, my lad, if you think so,"
said the captain, who knew the only
choice left was whether to go down
with the ship or in a small boat, which
couldn't live ten seconds in that sea.
The engineers came up with the news
that the fires were all out. "Very well, my lads," said the captain quietly; "save yourselves if you can."

"Won't you fetch the wife on deck,
sir?" asked one of the men.

"No," was the calm reply; "let her sleep, poor old girl. I am going down to have a smoke." And smoking by the bedside of his sleeping wife, he went down with the ship.

Woe is His.
First.—My wife is my boss. I shall not deny.
Second.—She maketh me to lie down
behind the bed when swell company
comes, and she leadeth me behind her
up Main street.

Third.—She restoreth my pocketbook
after she has spent all of its contents
for stylish skirts and theater tickets,
and she leadeth me up the main aisle
at church for her new hat's sake.

Fourth.—Yea, though I walk more
than half the night through dark rooms
with a crying baby I will get no rest,
for she is behind me; her broomstick
and her hatpin they do everything else
but comfort me.

Fifth.—She prepareth a cold snack for
me, then maketh a bee line for an aid society supper. She annoieth my head with the rolling pin occasionally. My arms runneth over with the bundles
before she is half done with her shop-

plug.
Sixth.—Surely her dressmaker's and milliner's bills shall follow me all the days of her life, and I will dwell in the house of my wife forever.—Ulrich (Mo.) Herald.

The Weaker Sex.

The young woman had spent a busy
day.
She had browbeaten fourteen sales
people, bullyragged a doorwalker,
argued victoriously with a milliner,
laid down the law to a modiste, nipped
in the bud a taxi chauffeur's attempt to overcharge her, made a street
car conductor stop the car in the middle of a block for her, disarmed her maud and engaged another and otherwise refused to allow herself to be imposed upon.
Yet she did not smile that evening
when a young man begged:
"Let me be your protector through life!"—Life.
